

This document sets out important information about how the person introducing you to us is paid and their role in arranging financing for the equipment you have chosen. We call them a 'credit broker' in this document.

Take time to read it carefully before you go ahead and consider the pre-contract information we provide to you and your finance agreement.

By signing this document, you agree to the credit broker being paid the amount set out below and the basis on which they are being paid.

If you do not agree to the way the credit broker is paid, then do not sign this document and do not sign your finance agreement.

Payments to the credit broker is acting as a credit broker and we refer to them as the 'credit broker' in this document. This means they are trying to find and introduce you to a lender who is prepared to enter into a credit agreement with you to finance the equipment you have chosen.

The credit broker is one of our trusted introducers who are regulated by the Financial Conduct Authority. We have an agreement with the credit broker which requires them to introduce you to us first before considering any other lender. They will only introduce you to another lender (who may offer an alternative deal or a lower interest rate) if we refuse to offer you finance.

Although credit brokers can help you by finding and introducing you to a lender, they are typically paid by lenders for introducing customers to them. That payment is called a commission. We will pay a commission directly to the credit broker if we and you enter into a finance agreement.

After we have entered an agreement with you, we will pay the credit broker a commission of £50.00 (plus VAT) of the document fee payable by you under the Agreement. The commission is set by us and the credit broker has no ability to change the sums you pay under the Agreement.

This commission arrangement is beneficial to the credit broker. They have presented us as the preferred lender because of the commercial agreement between us. You can arrange your own finance with another lender and should consider all options available to you.

Your consent to payment of commission to the credit broker

By signing this document, you:

- agree that you have read and understand this document;
- accept that the credit broker has not considered all finance options available in the market;
- accept that we will pay the credit broker the commission set out above in this document; and
- accept that the credit broker may have been influenced by the commission paid to them in suggesting our finance product to you.
